TODAY'S MEETING

Dr. Julia Metzker- ENGAGE

ENGAGE provides a blueprint for building a culture of engaged learning through the development of structured and assessable Community-based Engaged Learning (C-bEL) experiences that connect students with the liberal arts and the wider community.

Through Community-based Engaged Learning:

- students integrate theory and practice.
- students have direct community experiences for GC students.
- students participate in mutually beneficial collaborations with community partners.
- students critically reflect on their community-based experiences.

ENGAGE seeks to support faculty, students, staff, and community partners by creating a cadre of Community-based Engaged Learning (C-bEL) Fellows who will serve as mentors to ENGAGE grantees. In addition to advancing their own community-based projects, ENGAGE Fellows will support the development of learning experiences in which students contribute to the public good by addressing community issues and needs. Please visit the ENGAGE blog for more information.

Georgia College, students and faculty are encouraged to partner with community groups to address mutually identified needs and to promote public well-being through teaching, learning, scholarship, and outreach. As you develop your course syllabi, ENGAGE can help you incorporate community-based projects. ENGAGE offers workshops, grants, support for conference travel and opportunities to network with community partners. To learn more about ENGAGE visit engage.gcsu.edu.
